

HIGHLANDS		ISLAY
This is the largest area of Scotland and also distilleries. As such the variance in flavours and finish can vary greatly. With this in mind the whiskies can range from dry to sweet, some even having a touch of smoke and peat, overall however they are thought to have more of a kick. Naturally as per minimum requirements, all are aged in their barrels for at least 3 years.		Often called the 'Whisky Island' due to only eight distilleries there. The island produces very distinct malts, generally heavily peated and smoky in flavour.

SPEYSIDE		RYE
Technically Speyside lies within the Highland region. It is home to approximately half of Scotland's malt whisky distilleries. This small area of land produces mellow, sweet, and at times fruit aromatic whiskies.		Rye whiskey is either American whiskey, which must be made of at least 51% rye, or Canadian whiskey, which due to history must be called rye whiskey, and which may or may not contain any rye!

IRISH		JAPANESE
Most Irish pot still whiskey is distilled three times, while most (but not all) Scotch whisky, is distilled twice. Peat is rarely used in the malting process, so often Irish whiskey can have a smoother finish as opposed to the smoky, earthy overtones common to some Scotches.		Broadly speaking Japanese whisky is much more similar to the Scottish style than any other. Production dates back to 1870 in Japan. Although it was all to create whisky for the local market, today Japanese single malts are widely respected, often beating some of Scotland's best in blind tastings.

BOURBON		NEW ZEALAND WHISKIES
	Bourbon whiskey is a type of American whiskey: a barrel-aged distilled spirit made primarily from corn. Although the name “Bourbon” was applied in the 1850s, and the true Kentucky etymology was advanced by the 1870s, the invention or origin of bourbon is to date somewhat of a myth with varying stories. From the invention by a pioneering Baptist minister and distiller named Elijah Craig, to it being named after Bourbon St in New Orleans. One thing we do know : we love to drink it.

From the origins of December of 1969 when the Baker family went into production with it's first release in 1974, at the time renamed Wilson Distilleries. Located in Dunedin, it was the most Southernly whisky distillery in the world. Over the years, it has been passed through various global beverage companies, finally ceasing production in 1997-2000. Since then, a few attempts have been made at re-igniting what was left of the original distillations, and these have now finally been rebranded under a new passionate and invigorative stewardship. Although there are a few active distilleries currently in New Zealand, production is extremely limited at this time and mostly exported, with future releases eminent and hotly anticipated. In the mean time, we have put together a small selection of those rare original distillations which are slowly approaching the end of the line. So why not join us for a drop of history from the few barrels that remain?
